over 20 years and 10 years, the projected percentage figures are not apply. However, considering the Port State Control detention details of Indian ships since January 2002 under Paris MOU, no Indian ship comes in the above categories i.e. the ships which can be refused access or will be required to be inspected every month. In so far as expanded inspection requirements are concerned, Indian tankers, passenger ships, chemical and gas carriers do not generally operate in Paris MOU region. Therefore the new requirements of expanded inspections will affect only the Indian bulk carriers of over 12 years in age and most of Indian bulk carriers are in this age group. However, under the Safety Convention requirements all the ships are required to be in full readiness always to undergo expanded inspections successfully.
